

Announcing the Peter Jusczyk Best Paper Award

Language Learning and Development

Official journal of the Society for Language Development

Edited by
Susan Goldin-Meadow,
University of Chicago

LouAnn Gerken, University of Arizona

Cynthia Fisher, University of Illinois at Urbana - Champaign

The editors of Language Learning and Development will be presenting this brand new award to the best paper published in the journal each year. Preference will be given to authors five or fewer years past the Ph.D.

The first annual award will be given to a paper appearing in Volume 6 (2010) and presented to the winner(s) at the next SLD meeting.

Invitation to Submit

There has never been a better time to submit your article to Language Learning and Development. In addition to the Peter Jusczyk award, further new reasons to submit to the journal include:

- Language Learning and Development is now accepting submissions for Special Issues composed of 3-4 articles on a single topic, plus an introduction highlighting points of overlap and differences between the papers.
- Submissions of up to 4,000 words will now be considered as brief articles. Regular manuscripts may now go up to 40 double-spaced pages.
- In the interests of encouraging dialogue, we now welcome short commentaries for select, accepted articles.

For further submissions information, please refer to the "Instructions to Authors" page in the journal or go to the tab at the journal's website: <http://bit.ly/LLDauthors>
